About Institute of Social Studies Trust

The Institute of Social Studies Trust (ISST) is a non-profit, non-governmental organisation based in New Delhi, India. ISST was registered as a Trust in 1980.

ISST's overall aim is research for social change with a focus on livelihood, work and well-being of vulnerable communities from a gender perspective. ISST attempts to bridge the gaps between research, action and policy with objectives of promoting social justice and equity for the underprivileged.

ISST adopts multi-disciplinary approaches for its research. The scope of research ranges from analysis of macro level policies and data to micro level action research in India and beyond.

ISST believes that evaluative studies offer a potentially very valuable means of understanding the shortfall between the intentions of programmes and the actual outcomes. ISST has undertaken a large number of evaluative studies using a gender and equity focus.

ISST organises seminars and workshops with the purpose of discussing issues of contemporary concern bringing in views of activists as well as researchers and policy makers, and also to share and disseminate research findings.

The documentation centre at the ISST research centre aims to provide information and documentation support to researchers. It includes books, reports, journals, newsletters and unpublished documents both in print and digital versions.

ISST's community centre located within a poorer community of East Delhi, aims to empower women, children and adolescent youth through community mobilisation, legal action, information and educational inputs.

Institute of Social Studies Trust is a Public Charitable Trust registered with the Sub Registrar, New Delhi, vide registration No: 923 dated 25 February, 1980, registered at Core 6A, UG Floor, India Habitat Centre, Lodi Road, New Delhi 110003.

ISST is permitted to receive foreign contributions for its work. Its FCRA registration number is 231650070.

Message from the Chairperson

Having taken over as Chairperson of ISST this year I would like, at the outset, to express my thanks to those that have reposed trust in me and hope that I am able to meet their expectation in the future.

The ISST team has had a productive year, pursuing its agenda of research, advocacy and outreach activities with a view to influence policy for more gender equitable outcomes. In broad terms the principal focus of our work has continued on various aspects of women’s work and women’s empowerment, and also the development of methodologies and tools for policy and programme evaluation. This has resulted in sharing findings through publication of books, research papers and policy briefs and also through workshops and seminars.

The completed project on Engendering Policy through Evaluation, in addition to the above, has built a strong network of individuals and organisations involved in feminist evaluation and led to the development of a dynamic interactive online community of practice with over 2000 members across the globe. It also led to three workshops on the subject with the NITI Aayog. Other completed works led to insights into the imperatives for policy change especially in the domain of anti-rape laws and in relation to domestic workers; the development of a set of participatory tools and methodologies for domestic workers to be able to articulate their vision of change, and an evaluation of the impact of financial inclusion on informal sector workers.

During the year we continued organisation of the Gender and Economic Policy Discussion Fora on various subjects, funded by the Heinrich Boll Stiftung creating a valuable space for discourse between academicians, practitioners and policy makers. Under the GROW project on ‘Balancing unpaid care work and paid work’ inception workshops and fieldwork in India and Nepal were organised.

Other notable achievements have been the complete digitisation of our library through upgraded software and the continuance of activities of the Saathí centre for which we were able to raise some funding.
On behalf of the Board of Trustees I would like to congratulate the small, but very committed and dedicated team at ISST for the above progress and achievements; and needless to say also like to thank various agencies and individuals who have supported us in multiple ways during the year.

Sarojini G. Thakur
Chairperson, Board of Trustees
Message from the Office in Charge

I am delighted to share with you the Annual Report of the year 2015-16, highlighting our programmes and activities that we completed last year and still continuing over this year.

The project ‘Engendering policy through evaluation’ has been completed successfully. I am extremely delighted to say that we came out with a series of publications from this project. The online versions of these publications could be accessed freely through our website. The project ended with a two-day workshop cum seminar jointly organised with NITI Aayog. Over the year, ISST and our feminist evaluation team has conducted workshops and presented in several national and international evaluation conferences /events in India and abroad. We are also delighted to say that our online community of practice has now become a global hub for the Evalgender Plus, a global initiative by IOCE and UN Women. ISST is also acting as the secretariat for newly formed Evaluation Community of India (ECOI).

ISST completed a remarkable project on ‘State’s response to women’s claims’ and understanding gender egalitarian policy change in India. A few publications are already there from the research.

ISST is continuing with another exciting research on balancing unpaid care work and paid work in association with Institute of Development Studies, UK under the GROW initiative of IDRC, Canada. The project aims at creating a knowledge base on women's economic empowerment policy and program in order to provide and generate more support for women's care and work responsibilities.

Heinrich Boll Foundation has extended their support for one more year for organizing gender and economic policy discussion forums. The program is now in its fifth year. In 2015-16, the program could effectively bring together experts across academics and development sectors to discuss critical issues like gender equity at workplace, women’s unpaid work and the queer question and social costs of exclusion.

In the last year, ISST worked with ILO to develop participatory methods and tools for different stakeholders working with the domestic workers in defining the strategy and model of change.
ISST is now part of an international project on 'Feminist analysis of social and solidarity economy practices: Views from Latin America and India'. ISST is working jointly with SEWA Kerala to study the Indian perspectives of solidarity economy.

The community Centre in East Delhi has finally received some funding from the Wipro Care to cover one of its programs with young children. The team at the Community Centre is continuing with other regular activities with adolescents and young adults and women.

The research and administrative team at ISST cooperated and provided all support for continuing our work. The trustees continued their support in smooth functioning of the Institute.

We look forward to sharing our journey of learning as we continue to build on the strong foundation of mission and vision of ISST.

COMPLETED PROJECTS

1. Youth Study in India: Delhi and Kolkata

The Social Development Division (SDD) of UNESCAP, in its effort to build a stronger evidence base on youth policies as well as indicators related to the circumstances the youth are in and their participation in various activities, commissioned country studies. The research included questionnaire survey in four countries of Asia and the Pacific; supplemented by focus group discussions and secondary research.

ISST took part in an Expert Group meeting held in Bangkok in the month of November, 2014. Subsequently ISST carried out the India chapter of the study. ISST conducted a survey among 2000 youth from Delhi and Kolkata, and 6 focus group discussions with youth in Delhi and Kolkata. Apart from the data collection, ISST produced a report on the data collected from Delhi and Kolkata and a situational report on youth in India.

2. When and Why do States Respond to Women's Claim; Understanding Gender-Egalitarian Policy Change in Asia

ISST has completed an inter-comparative research study by UNRISD on gender egalitarian policy that explored when and why states respond to women’s claims making. The study was conducted in three Asian countries – India, China and Indonesia. ISST conducted the India component of the research focused on the three states of Delhi, Gujarat and Karnataka. Dr Nitya Rao, Professor of Gender and Development at the University of East Anglia coordinated the project for UNRISD. The project focused on two issue areas: violence against women and domestic workers (including a focus on migrant workers). In India, the focus of the research was primarily on understanding the processes of policy change in relation to anti-rape laws and women domestic workers in the two states of Gujarat and Karnataka.

The project kicked off in August 2013 with a methodology workshop held in New Delhi, India. The workshop was attended by the country research teams, UNRISD project coordinators and invited experts from UN agencies, civil society and academia. After the data was collected in each of the countries, a writing workshop was held in October 2014 in India which saw participation from all the research partners, the ensuing discussions were very fruitful in generating themes and ideas for the research papers to be based on the study. The outputs of the research project include a comprehensive report on the study available at http://www.unrisd.org/indiareport. Two research papers based on the study were presented at international conferences including Gender Relations and Rising Inequalities, School of International Development, University of East Anglia, 6th to 8th July 2015, Norwich, UEA; and at the 4th Regulation for Decent Work (RDW) Conference (on Domestic Workers ) at ILO, Geneva (8th – 10th July, 2015) respectively. The paper based on the findings in relation to domestic workers movement was also presented at the Rosa Luxemberg Stiftung (RLS) Conference – Labour (Un) Divided: Categories and Collectives (17th - 20th November 2015) at Jadavpur University, Kolkata.

3. Development of Participatory Methods and Tools for Defining Strategy and Model of Change in Domestic Work

ISST was assigned to develop a set of tools that were suitable for domestic workers, most of whom were women, and belonged to socially disadvantaged groups, possessing no or little formal education, and little experience in articulating their views. The set of tools were based on principles of participatory action-learning approach, aimed at enabling domestic workers to define their vision of desired outcomes in the future; the journey of change from the current situation to ideal future; and a set of related facilitator’s guides for those (organisers, trainers and leaders of domestic workers) who would use the participatory tools.

ISST facilitated three workshops – two in Delhi and one in Chennai with domestic workers and representatives from NGOs, trade unions, placement agencies, employers and ILO. In doing so, ISST adopted the Community Life Competence approach. Two SALT visits were also conducted in Tigri in southern Delhi. ISST along with all the stake holders jointly developed a self assessment framework and an action plan for six months for domestic workers present in the workshop. ISST also drafted a manual for facilitators to develop a self-assessment tool for domestic workers using the Community Life Competence Process.

_Sponsored by ILO_

The project was completed over a span of four years, and over this period, a strong network of individuals and organisations in India interested in and working on feminist evaluation, was built. The network building activity was sustained through workshops, a feminist evaluation Google group (80 members), as well as, a dynamic interactive online community of practice on gender and evaluation at http://gendereval.ning.com/ (with 2320 members from across the world). The work of capacity building, as well as, building a base of knowledge on feminist evaluation was sustained through workshops, small research grants offered by the project, and through publications.

!Country Wise Distribution of Members on the Online Community (as on October, 2015)

In the last year of the project, two policy workshops were conducted which focused on sharing some of the evaluation methodologies and findings and reflected on ways in which these could be useful in improving programme outcomes in the future, particularly with the policy makers. Thus, overall, 6 training workshops and 2 policy workshops were conducted in 4 years. The workshops functioned as both capacity building spaces as well as spaces to share research on feminist evaluation.

As part of the work on building a base of knowledge on feminist evaluation, the project offered, additionally, 3 small research grants for reflective research on evaluations in this year, making it a total of 11 grants over the project period. (All 11 studies have been completed.) Some of the outputs of the earlier research grants have already been published while the others are being readied for publication. Two books have already been published, namely the ‘Toolkit on Gender-Sensitive Participatory Evaluation Methods’, and ‘Engendering Meta-Evaluations: Towards Women’s Empowerment’. The structure and content of the third book, ‘A Resource Pack on Gender Transformative Evaluations’ - has been finalized. A fourth edited book has been put together for publication by a publishing house for wider outreach. Please find the publications here http://www.isstindia.org/publications/

In addition, three training videos on the topics - What are Gender-Transformative Evaluations; Principles, Values and Ethics of Gender-Transformative Evaluations; and, USE of Evaluations in a Gender and Equity Context were shot, of which the first two have already been put up on the online community, and well received. Please find the link to the all three videos under the publications section.

5. Baseline and End-line Study for the SEWA Bharat Project - Economic and Social Empowerment of Women Workers and Underprivileged Girls of Informal Sector of Bihar and Rajasthan

A baseline and an endline study had been carried out in 5 districts of Bihar and in 3 districts of Rajasthan for the SEWA Bharat project - Economic and Social Empowerment of Women Workers and Under-privileged Girls on Informal Sector of Bihar and Rajasthan. The baseline study was intended principally for learning and accountability purposes. It was expected to generate relevant findings which would be used to track the progress of the project and monitor the expected outcomes and to guide and inform current work and future programming. The more specific objectives of the baseline study were to provide a good understanding of the status of women and adolescent girls in the project areas to benchmark information and set out parameters for measuring project outcome and impact.

The baseline study had adopted a mixed methods approach by using both qualitative and quantitative methods to get a more variegated picture of the socio-economic context of women and girls in the 8 districts of the project. The study used questionnaire survey method at the household level, focus group discussions with women, adolescent girls and men and interviews with SEWA Bharat team in Bihar and Rajasthan, both at state level and at district level, as well as with the Ruaab SEWA team, a unique model of garment production and sourcing that is owned and managed by women producers initiated by SEWA, in Delhi.

The study focused its findings on the existing occupations, levels of skills, income levels, access to credit and financial institutions, access to social security schemes in order to assess the impact of the planned interventions by SEWA at the end of the project. It also provided some recommendations on the formative aspects of the project.

The endline study was undertaken in December 2015 to assess the impact of the SEWA Bharat project on strengthening financial inclusion of women in the informal sector, setting up youth resource centres to conduct trainings for skill development and enhancement, and capacity building in order to tap market opportunities. The study was conducted in three districts of Rajasthan namely, Jaipur, Jodhpur and Bikaner and five districts of Bihar namely, Munger, Bhagalpur, Kathihar, Purnia, and Patna.

ISST used elements of SALT approach to facilitate a participatory workshop prior to the data collection process in both Bihar as well as Rajasthan. The workshop engaged SEWA staff and community members in identifying evaluation questions, stakeholders for data collection and other information valuable to evaluation process. This process facilitated reflection of workshop participants on the project and build ownership around evaluation findings. The evaluation adopted a mixed method approach by using both qualitative and quantitative methods. Questionnaire surveys, in-depth interviews, Skype interviews and FGDs were conducted with different stakeholders including women of credit societies/SHGs, trainees and ex-trainees at the different SEWA Youth Resource Centres, members of SEWA Bharat at both the district and state level.

SEWA has followed a holistic approach in empowering the women by encouraging savings, providing loans, linking women to services to reduce their financial expenditure. The project has helped SEWA Bharat to expand its work and strengthen various institutes promoted by it.

ONGOING PROJECTS

1. Balancing unpaid care work and paid work: successes, challenges and lessons for women’s economic empowerment programmes and policies

The research project ‘Balancing unpaid care work and paid work’ is being conducted in partnership with the Institute of Development Studies (IDS) in the UK, and BRAC’s East Africa Research and Evaluation Unit (REU) in Uganda, along with Oxfam Nepal, Mobile Crèches in India, Oxfam Tanzania and ActionAid Rwanda. The project is a part of a larger international research initiative called Growth and Equal Opportunities for Women (GrOW), jointly funded by the UK’s Department for International Development (DFID), The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, and Canada’s International Development Research Centre (IDRC) in 14 countries in Sub Saharan Africa and South Asia.

The project aims to create knowledge about how women’s economic empowerment (WEE) policy and programming can generate a ‘double boon’ - paid work that empowers women and provides more support for their unpaid care work responsibilities. ISST will be using a mixed methods approach to study state and non-state programmes in India and Nepal. The research findings will help in understanding the gaps in policies and programmes and inform research uptake to promote a positive balance between unpaid care work and paid work of women leading up to WEE.

The research project is 27 months long, beginning from January 2015. Up till now two important workshops of all the partners have been held; the inception workshop was the first workshop held in April 2015 at IDS UK to establish the overall common research goals and commensurate research methodologies between partners. The second workshop was held in June 2015 in India, to develop research tools required for the study. The data collection for the study in India and Nepal is underway. The study including the research uptake will end in March 2017.

2. Gender and Economic Policy Discussion Forum

The Gender and Economic Policy Discussion Forum organised by the Institute of Social Studies Trust in association with Heinrich Boll Stiftung aims to contribute to a process through which public discourse on economic policy is made more sensitive to gender concerns. Policy discourse is deeply rooted in economic analysis. Most often, gender does not appear as an integral aspect of economic analysis: at best, it is seen as a ‘second order’ effect. It is often assumed that as the economy develops the gender gaps in health status, education and capabilities in general, will be eliminated. However, there is ample evidence to show that while gender gaps may come down, gender biases do not go away with economic prosperity and equally, poverty is not the cause of gender bias.

The Gender and Economic Policy Discussion Forums, thus, provide an opportunity to discuss and critique economic and social policy from a gender lens and provide an opportunity for interaction between academics, policy makers, civil society activists and gender advocates in a structured manner. By bringing together people with different perspectives, background and experience, the project expects to shift public discourse around selected key policy issues in the direction of gender sensitivity to create space for dialogue between the concerned theorists, policy makers and practitioners and to be reflected in the work of individuals who participate in the forums.

These forums are organised once in three- four months in Delhi and the details of the forums held between April 2015– March 2016 are listed below:
GEP 16 - 'The Queer Question: Socio-Economic and Political Costs of Exclusion', 21st of May, 2015

Speakers: Devaki Jain, Founder & Former Director, ISST; Deepta Chopra, Institute of Development Studies (IDS); Sudeshna Sengupta, Mobile Creches; Neetha N., Centre for Women's Development Studies; Sejal Dand, ANANDI

Speakers: Sudarshana Kundu, Gender at Work; Harpreet Kaur, Business & Human Rights Resource Centre; Kalyani Menon Sen, Independent Researcher; Reiko Tsushima, International Labour Organisation

Sponsor: Heinrich Boll Foundation, India

3. Informal Construction and Domestic Work: Collaborative Research on Institutional Influences in Job Quality

ISST collaborated with Dr. Rina Agarwala (Associate Professor, Department of Sociology at the Johns Hopkins University) on a 5 country comparative study on informal construction and domestic work to expand knowledge on how informal workers organise and to help guide policy-making and organisational development in informal domestic and construction work around the world. As the local collaborator, ISST undertook detailed qualitative study on domestic work in India to examine (1) the job quality, including objective measures such as pay and hours, as well as more subjective and process measures such as degree of voice across the industry, and (2) the organizing strategies, demands, and targets of workers in the industry. The research examined the institutional factors structuring the relevant labor markets and influencing job quality, with a particular focus on the role of worker organisations. The findings from the study will be presented at the third International Sociological Association Forum on sociology, from July 10-14, 2016 in Vienna.

4. Feminist Analysis of Social and Solidarity Economy Practices: Views from Latin America and India

ISST is a principal partner of a research project entitled, “Feminist Analysis of Social and Solidarity Economy Practices: Views from Latin America and India” funded by Swiss Network of International Studies (SNIS). Solidarity Economy is not commonly used in the Indian context. However, feminist movement based on the principles of solidarity economy has already been consolidated in several Latin American countries for quite some time now. On the other hand, in India, there is a long standing tradition of women’s movements combining “struggle” and “development”. Though the term “solidarity economy” is not used, basic principles of solidarity economy could be observed in some of these movements in India too. In addition to everyday practical support (such as care and health services, popular education, microfinance, cooperatives of producers or artisans, management of common resources, etc.), these initiatives engage in various lobbying activities with local governments, employers (when they can be identified), governments, trade unions and sometimes international organisations. Given the prevalence of informal labour in India, social protection is a major issue. SEWA (Self-Employed Women’s Association-India) is one of the best known examples, but many other initiatives exist, both in rural and urban areas, in various sectors of the economy. Unlike Latin America, where “solidarity economy” is formally recognized and institutionalized through specific public policies, these initiatives don’t come under a common umbrella and rather promote sectoral or territorial approaches. The proposed project hypothesizes that to be truly transformative SSE needs to also address the reorganisation of social reproduction, integrating the political goals of gender equality and more equitable power relations. ISST has selected SEWA Kerala as a case study following a brainstorming session with experts on Indian versions of feminist solidarity movement. SEWA Kerala accepted ISST’s offer and has allowed ISST to study the organisation from the perspective of solidarity economy. In January, Rajib Nandi from ISST attended the kick-off workshop in Geneva. Partners from Latin America and India joined the workshop and presented their prospective case studies. In March, Rajib Nandi and Shiny Saha joined another workshop in Pondicherry to discuss the methodology to be adopted in Indian case studies. The field work has just begun in Kerala.

5. ISST Saathi Centre

The ISST Saathi Centre is continuing with a truncated set of its activities with its Youth Resource Centre, the Right to Information (RTI) Help Desk and library activities, apart from fund raising activities.

ISST recently received funds from Wipro Care to continue Bachpan programme in Saathi Centre, east Delhi. Under the programme young children between the age group of 4 and 15 years are provided support in school education. The focus of the programme is building character and personality. Help is also provided in school admission, re admission of school dropouts and admissions in private schools under 25% free ship quota.

The Delhi Police continues to support the ISST Saathi Centre by providing space and basic infrastructure inside Kalyanpuri Police Station for running its activities (which it has been doing since 2006). Apart from providing space and other infrastructural support, presently they are also providing the Yuva Project (started by Delhi police in 2012) certification to the trainees of our different vocational programmes.

International Society for Better Tomorrow (ISBET) partially supported the life skill training under the Youth and Livelihoods Initiative at Saathi Centre. Mrs. and Mr. John Butcher from Canada partially supported the Saathi Centre activities in the year 2015-16.

The following activities are being undertaken at ISST Saathi Centre:

- Computer Training Programme for Adolescents and Young Adults.
- Life Skill Training Programme for Adolescents and Young Adults
• Periodic Vocational Training Programmes (such as mobile repairing, carpentry, tailoring, pottery and crafts, tailoring and dress designing, electrician training, plumbing etc) in association with Delhi Police

• Workshops on RTI

• Theatre Club

• Film Club

• Library

• Exposure Trips

• Bachpan Programme (Now funded by Wipro Care)

Documentation and Library Resources

The ISST library and documentation centre was started in 1984 with the aim of providing information and documentation support to scholars, researchers, planners and development agencies. Additions to the library are in accordance with on-going research priorities. The library is open to all and ISST offers a bibliography search service.

Last year ISST developed its own digital repository, which includes all types of institutional digital content including ISST research reports, annual reports, monographs, working papers, data set and photographs. ISST’s digital repository has also been linked to the ISST website and provides access to the readers through the internet. This may be accessed through our website at http://www.isstindia.org/

The ISST library has upgraded its software from WINISIS to KOHA - an opensource integrated library software. KOHA provides internet based services, which enables users to access materials from their Desktop from any location. Koha is an Integrated Library System, which includes special features like OPAC module which provides a simple and clear interface for library users to perform tasks such as searching, reserving items and suggesting new items. The Cataloguing Module enables the library staff to capture details of all library items. The Circulation Module fully automates borrowing and item management, integrating with the OPAC.
